

British, French Believe Russia Stronger Than U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A news magazine reported Monday that polls taken by U.S. government agencies indicate a majority of British and French people believe Russia leads the U.S. in military strength.

The magazine said eight heretofore confidential polls in 13 non-Communist countries over the past four years also indicated the United States has never regained scientific prestige it lost when Russia launched Sputnik I.

Defence Secretary Thomas S. Gates yesterday disputed the idea Russia has overtaken the United States in military power. He appeared before the Senate defence appropriations subcommittee. (See story below.)

The magazine said the polls formed the basis of a good portion of recent testimony given to the House space committee by George V. Allen, director of the U.S. Information Agency (USIA). Allen testified that American prestige had suffered with the launching of Sputnik I in 1957.

President Eisenhower, at his news conference last week, questioned whether international prestige was involved in the space race.

The report said a summary of the polls taken by the U.S. information service and other agencies indicated the effect of Sputnik I was "to plunge U.S. scientific prestige far below that of the U.S.S.R."

Although U.S. prestige was said to have picked up in the 18 months after the launching of the first Sputnik, the polls showed it never regained any appreciable lead, the magazine said.

According to the magazine, USIA officials suggested Eisenhower was thinking in terms of the general esteem in which America is held when he spoke last week about "admirable" U.S. space achievements.

The magazine said the polls

showed the loss of U.S. prestige was particularly acute in India. It said "there 58 per cent believed Russia was ahead in space developments; only 7 per cent thought the U.S. was ahead."

Polls among Turkish students and in Italy indicated the same belief, the magazine said.

No More on Missiles Defence Chief Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defence Secretary Thomas S. Gates told a sceptical Congress yesterday if he had all the money he wanted, he wouldn't spend any more on missiles "at this time."

Gates made the statement as members of the senate defence appropriations committee questioned him closely on the adequacy of American missile power.

Disarmament

East, West Meet

LONDON (Reuters) — The disarmament policies of East and West will come under close unofficial scrutiny here today at a conference attended by delegates from 19 countries including the United States and Canada.

Organizers of the three-day meeting, described as a "foot-hills conference," have stressed that delegates will attend strictly in a personal capacity. But the discussions are expected to indicate the flexibility of the East and West in altering policy to reach agreement on international disarmament.

The Eastern delegates are not expected to depart from basic Communist policies, but the line they take might indicate how conciliatory their governments could become, given a positive response from the West.

Canada will be represented by Milton Gregg, labor minister in the former Liberal government.

One of the East's delegates is Dr. A. Arzumani, member of Russia's Parliament and of the central committee of the Communist party. He will speak on the economic consequences of disarmament.

Big Ben Leaning

LONDON (UPI)—London has a leaning tower of its own. It is the 302-foot tower topped by famed Big Ben.

A check disclosed that the tower had a tilt of four inches from the vertical. The check was made after cracks were discovered in the thick masonry where an arcade joins the foot of the tower. Some of the cracks were almost two inches wide.

But a spokesman for the ministry of works said "there is no need for alarm—four inches out of the true in a tower of that height is not serious."

Already Disarmed —That's Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has no choice on the disarmament question because it already is disarmed, Jean T. Richard (L., Ottawa) said in the Commons Monday.

"We have a very well trained group of men and women in our armed forces but they are disarmed," he said. "They have no weapons to wage a modern war or to defend against modern war."

Leader Faces Trial

Revolt Collapses, De Gaulle Triumphs

ALGIERS (AP) — The French insurrection in Algiers ended ingloriously Monday with one of the two leaders in custody and the other in flight. (See also Page 22.)

The last die-hards marched out of the barricades after getting a harsh army dictate to form a unit with the French Foreign Legion to fight Algeria's Moslem rebels or go home and face possible trial for subversion.

UNBENDING — Moving firmly to end the eight-day uprising, President Charles de Gaulle's government laid down the unbending alternatives: They were relayed to the insurgents by a paratrooper colonel at a meeting behind the barricades Sunday night.

A government spokesman said 420 of the insurgents who surrendered with their military leader, Pierre LaGaillarde, agreed to serve with the legion as a special unit.

The 29-year-old LaGaillarde, a deputy in the French Parliament, was arrested and flown to Paris where he will face trial.

Joseph Ortiz, the saloon keeper who was political boss of the insurrection, fled as his comrades fled out of the barricades to surrender. A warrant was issued for his arrest.

All the men with LaGaillarde were told they could return to their families, but if they did so they faced investigations. These would be made by authorities sent from Paris, not local officials who might be sympathetic. Those insurgents would be tried who were found to have participated in an "attack on the internal security of the state," the spokesman said.

The insurgents were loaded into army trucks and taken to a camp near Algiers.

BARRICADES DOWN

Down came the insurgents' barricades of paving stone and rubble—bristling symbols of their defiance of President de Gaulle's policy of self-determination for Algeria's 9,000,000 Moslems.

After de Gaulle's speech Friday commanding the army to restore order, the Algerians brought up overwhelming force Sunday. They cordoned off the insurgent camp in the centre of the city from direct support of the civilian population.

SHOWDOWN

When the showdown came, the screaming mobs who had cheered the insurgents with cries of "Algeria is French" were nowhere in sight.

Left in isolation, bombarded with leaflets and loudspeaker broadcasts, the defenders of the barricades gave in,

Red Rocket

Second Shot Dead On

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Russia announced Monday it test-fired a second powerful new rocket so successfully Sunday that its current series of mid-Pacific tests have been wound up halfway through the scheduled period.

Observers here said it was likely that after the apparently successful test program, a spectacular new Soviet space attempt may be made any day now.

The tests were scheduled to end Feb. 15.

The announcement of the test, unlike that of the first rocket launching Jan. 20, did not mention the rocket's range or accuracy.

The first rocket hit within 1 1/4 miles of its target.

The latest test was said to have been "in accordance with the plan of perfecting a more powerful ballistic rocket."

Western observers had no doubt that Sunday's test was as accurate as the first.

Russian scientists also have spoken of instrument packages bound for Venus and Mars and the landing of a cosmic station on the moon.

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian National Exhibition has rejected a proposal to seek the Calgary Stampede for the 1960 show.

"There would also be objections from the humane society," he said. "A lot of animals suffer broken legs."

Border Troops Clash

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector (UPI)—Israel and the United Arab Republic Monday exchanged threats of war following the sixth straight day of sporadic troop clashes along the Syrian frontier.

A new incident was reported last night. An Israeli spokesman said Syrian machine guns opened fire for 10 minutes on Israeli positions. He said the Israelis did not return the fire.

STATE OF EMERGENCY

(In Cairo, the government declared a state of emergency, all leaves were cancelled throughout the armed forces and it was reported Egyptian troops already were moving toward the disputed sector.)

In Israel, the situation was equally tense, with Premier David Ben-Gurion threatening a new Israeli military campaign if the United Nations Peace Force failed to prevent what he called further Arab violations in a demilitarized zone along the Syrian-Israel border. Tension heightened when Israeli and Syrian jets joined the battle for the first time.

CLAMP BOTH JAWS

Cairo radio declared last night that the U.A.R. stood "ready to clamp both jaws (Egypt and Syria) and crush Israel between them."

"We are ready to hit, hit, hit, if necessary as far as Tel Aviv," the broadcast said.

Both here and in Damascus, top government and military officials met hurriedly to consider the latest and most serious clash in the six days of border tension. Syrian and Israeli forces battled in the zone early yesterday at Tawfik on the Syrian side. There also were conflicting reports from both sides of an air battle over the zone.

Fewer Politicians Needed Macmillan Tells Basutos

MASERU, Basutoland (UPI)

—With more sportsmen and fewer politicians the world would be a better place, British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan said during discussions here yesterday.

Thousands of gaily dressed Basutos gave Macmillan a friendly welcome when he landed in the blazing sun.

Many of the crowd wore typical Basuto conical straw hats.

Commenting on the recent Basutoland elections, Macmillan said he was happy to see modern democratic methods soundly based on traditions of the past. "Let the old traditional methods and the new elected democracy work as partners, not as rivals," he added.

Macmillan and his wife were presented with colored shawls and conical straw hats.

CAPETOWN (UPI)—Prime Minister Macmillan flew here yesterday to the warmest welcome of his South African tour and an assurance South Africa had no ulterior motive in inviting him to visit the Union.

Eat and Grow Young

Fat Must Be Burned Up

By Lelord Kordel

Daily Colonist, Victoria
Tuesday, Feb. 2, 1960

(Fourteenth of a Series)

Arteries are seldom mentioned these days without the companion words "hardening" and "cholesterol." A lot of misconception has arisen from half-understood reports on the need to "limit the diet" to avoid hardening of the arteries (arteriosclerosis), the condition which sometimes leads to a heart seizure or to ruptured blood vessels in the brain. That is why my sixth and final commandment is, "Young arteries above all else."

Cholesterol is a fat-like substance evidently vital to human life, since it is found in every living cell. It has been noted that cholesterol does have a close biochemical relationship to the bile acids produced in the liver for digestion of fats, and to the hormones secreted by some of the glands.

Since cholesterol occurs in such abundance in all living matter, we know that it's essential to the body. We have also established beyond all doubt that the body can manufacture the cholesterol it needs. Further, we know that under normal conditions excess, unwanted amounts of this fatty substance can be destroyed in the body.

But the most important thing for you to remember about cholesterol is this: The consumption of heavy starches causes deposits of cholesterol to form in the body, mainly in the arteries.

Today, some medical scientists place the blame for too much cholesterol in the blood on foods that actually are valuable sources of nutrition—cheese, egg yolk, liver, gland meats, and unsaturated vegetable oils.

Diet is being prescribed that greatly restricts the use of these excellent foods. Also prohibited are pies, rich cakes, cookies and all fried foods—none of which, of course, should be given a place in any diet. Nothing, however, seems to be said about white bread, devitalized cereals, white rice, macaroni and similar pure-starch items.

Fats, the same as carbohydrates, are used by the body to supply heat and energy. Right at the start, we begin to realize that the average diet is top-heavy with two food elements—fats and carbohydrates—both with the same nutritional function, that of providing heat and energy. Carbohydrates, when too plentiful in the diet, usurp the natural function of the fat foods, thereby allowing the fats to be deposited instead of being burned for energy.

It is when fats are eaten to excess or combined with high-carbohydrate meals, that they pile up in all these unwanted and dangerous places—around the heart and on the inner walls of the arteries.

My advice to you on arteries would be only half complete if I were to neglect reporting the encouraging results being obtained in hundreds of cases of hardened arteries treated with choline and inositol—two members of the well-known vitamin-B complex family.

Choline, a fat-dissolving agent, is a wonderful aid to promoting normal distribution of food fat throughout the body in the proper storage places provided for fat (under the skin is one such place).

Choline and inositol are found in most high protein foods—lean beef and lamb, organ meats, liver, kidney, heart, brains, sweetbreads, eggs, and natural cheese.

A choline and inositol deficiency results mainly from a diet low in protein, and high in fats and carbohydrates.

If you want to avoid the circulatory disorders which rank among the chief killers past the age of 40, then my earnest plea to you is this: Starting with your next meal, put yourself for life on a high-protein, low starch-low fat diet.

TORONTO (CP) — The greatest contribution Western churches and Commonwealth countries can make to the emergent African nations is to "cry down continuously" the discrimination against Africans in their own countries, says Sir Francis Ibiem of Nigeria.

Sir Francis, a Presbyterian church elder, is visiting this country at the invitation of the central board of missions of the Presbyterian Church of Canada.

He told a press conference he is disappointed Canada has not made a stronger stand against racial discrimination in Africa.

He considered Prime Minister Diefenbaker could have been more outspoken as a Christian, if not as a statesman. Sir Francis was referring to Mr. Diefenbaker's recent refusal to condemn discrimination in South Africa.

Neck Strength Is Insurance Against Injury

By LLOYD PERCIVAL
(14th of a Series)

For extra protection and insurance against any possible injury through accident to this vulnerable area, everyone needs neck strength and flexibility.

Weakness in the neck muscles is one of the chief contributors to poor posture and its associated detrimental effects.

NECK CIRCLES

Move your head in large circles, back, to the side and then forward as far as possible.

Continue rotating it, first in one direction and then the other, until the muscles tire.

Do the exercise fairly slowly at first, gradually increasing speed.

RESISTANCE

(a) With your head back as far as possible, place the palm of one hand on your forehead.

Now pull your head forward and down until your chin touches your chest, resisting the action by slight pressure with your hand.

Continue until slightly tired.

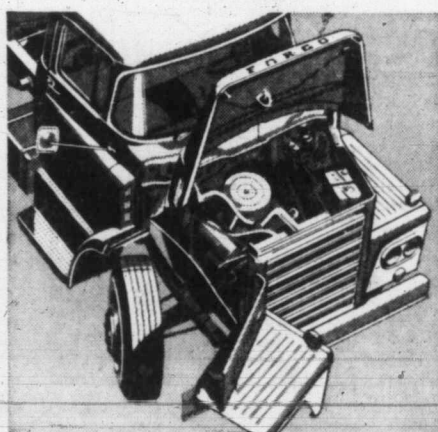

(b) Drop your chin to your chest. Clasp your hands behind the top back of your head, then move your head as far back as possible, resisting the action with slight pressure from the hands.

Continue, this until slightly tired.

Hit-and-Run Drivers

IN the punishment of hit-and-run drivers there is a factor to be considered which may not be fully appreciated by some of the courts, especially those presided over by lay magistrates. It has to do with the possibility that by running from the scene of an accident a driver is able to evade prosecution for something worse.

Young drivers who run away after hitting someone or something may do so because of a feeling of panic and nothing else. But in many cases involving older people—and juveniles too, of course—there is a more urgent personal motive. The motorist who has been drinking knows that if he stays to meet the police he may be arrested and charged with impaired driving with the certainty, if convicted, of a heavy fine and the probability of licence suspension as well. A delay of arrest is all that is needed to avoid that. Then if the hit-and-run driver is tracked down the worst he has to face, unless the accident was a serious one, is a charge of failing to remain at the scene. The police may suspect all they like, but to sustain a charge of impaired driving they must have proof that he was impaired at the time when he was driving.

So long as courts treat cases of failing to remain at the scene as offences punishable by relatively small fines, there will be incentive to drinking drivers to get away as fast as they can. If, however, the customary penalty were to be made very severe—which it quite legitimately could be, for this can be a very serious matter to injured parties—drivers might find it to their advantage to stay and face the music. Most magistrates have set routine fines for impaired driving: $250 in Victoria for example. If the usual fine for leaving the scene of an accident were, say, twice that plus suspension of licence, the driver who had been drinking would be under less inducement to turn himself into a fugitive.

Cases of leaving the scene usually conjure up pictures of hapless victims abandoned in pain, possibly to die through delay of attention. Those are the extreme cases. Most of them cause financial hardship without necessarily involving personal injury. So long as one party to a collision remains unidentified the other may not be able to collect insurance and must pay the full cost of repairs out of his own pocket. These nowadays can run into many hundreds of dollars. Thus hitting-and-running besides being a criminal offence is a mean and despicable act fully deserving heavy punishment.

Let It Be Ended

THE comic opera of the "Queen's bust" keeps adding a new verse every week. It is no wonder that the sculptress herself is "sick of the subject." If Her Majesty were aware of the humming-and-hawing attending the monument meant to commemorate her visit she would probably agree.

The latest development is an offer by Mr. Sam Lane to buy the bust and place it on his Old England Inn property, where "thousands of tourists would see it." So they would but they would be patrons of Mr. Lane's private attractions, not the general public for whom the statue is designed.

In any case it would be a humiliating civic episode to sell a "royal" commemorative sculpture just to relieve municipal officials of problems of cost and location. That would be the last straw indeed. Victoria would be the laughing stock of the country.

It is a commentary on local behavior, also, that fears lest vandals would scar it and make it a target for potshots should prevent the bust being erected as originally intended in Beacon Hill Park. Unfortunately the fears are not without foundation.

We can suggest a better sanctuary for the statue. Why not place it in the grounds of Government House, in the area where Her Majesty met thousands of Victorians at the garden party during her visit? This would mark the royal occasion of last summer as suitably as the spot in the park where the civic welcome was tendered. One imagines both His Honor and the public works department would readily agree to this location.

Let the City Council bring this matter to a close. Let the sculptress be paid her modest fee for the work; let the city fathers forget about the reluctant adjacent municipalities; and let the bust be erected without any further delay. The longer this affair drags on the more ridiculous it becomes.

New Home for Elderly

DECISION by Salvation Army headquarters to go ahead with the projected new home for the aged at Mount Adelaide, in Esquimalt, at a cost of approximately three-quarters of a million should have an important bearing on needed facilities of the community in that regard. The Salvation Army has announced that it will call tenders this spring for the first stage of construction which, when completed in 1961, will have living accommodation for 140 elderly residents.

Incorporated in the design will be a small infirmary for the care of residents at the institution. The new home will be a complete and self-sufficient unit, and a handsome addition to a type of residential provision which is badly needed.

Interpreting the News

Same Aims, Means Differ

By ULYS YATES

Associated Press Correspondent

PARIS (AP)—Both the insurgents holding the barricades in Algiers and the government in Paris want the same thing—a pacified Algeria firmly French. They differ on how to bring it about.

That accounts for the strange quirks and contradictions that seem to give a split personality to some of the leaders on both sides of the uprising.

The insurgents believe the government's policy of self-determination will fail, and ultimately result in independence for the predominantly Moslem land.

The government believes President de Gaulle's moderate policy represents the only hope for ending the five-year-old Moslem rebellion and the best hope of preserving the French position in Algeria.

This was the gist of delegate-general Paul Delouvrier's plea to the insurgents: "You can't settle the Algerian question without the help of the Moslems, and the Moslems trust de Gaulle."

This common bond—the passionate desire for a French Algeria—which unites insurgents and government loyalists has resulted in some odd things.

Government officials refer to the insurgents as "patriots."

Paratroopers watch idly as the insurgents reinforce the stronghold the troops may be asked to storm.

Both sides fly the tricolor. Troops and insurgents chat amiably while pointing guns at each other.

Paratroopers snap to attention and salute when the insurgents break into the Marseillaise. They even salute the insurgents.

Government officials in same speech will call upon insurgents to lay down their arms and defend what the rebels fighting for.

Some insurgents help out the stronghold during the day and return to their homes at nightfall—computers mugging the 9-to-5 shift at barricades. They pass without hindrance through the line of troops encircling the barricaded area.

Up to now the uprising seemed to follow the script of a comic opera, but a settlement has come now.

"Talk about the high cost of tranquilizers!"

Thinking Aloud

... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

I SEE by the Christian Science Monitor that a Soviet astronomer says the earth is 31 seconds behind time.

Keeping accord with the human Joneses, I suppose, who nowadays are more often late than early. Especially in Victoria. Punctuality went out when the automobile came in.

(That remark is merely to "date" the change of habit, since cars are among the fastest things we know.) Time in the abstract is what is learnedly known as the "experience of duration." In more familiar terms it's the figures on a calendar or the position of hands on a clock. Or, in other guise, the precise moment a wife is supposed to meet her husband. Only supposed, mind you.

You would not think that the earth, our world, paid any attention to time. It just seems to orbit on and on, regardless.

Perhaps it is getting tired of whirling around. Taking an Olympian view of those who people it, one couldn't blame it.

(That is a cynical observation which means nothing. Wiseacres have been voicing such belittlements for centuries. I daresay that in relation to his "time" homo sapiens needn't bow to his predecessors or his successors.)

The earth is tardy only by our reckoning, however. The official timekeepers, affirms the Soviet astronomer, have neglected to allow for its wobbling.

Which seems fair enough. The earth does as it pleases, and if it wants to wobble that's its business. Ours comes only in dividing up the "experience of duration" to suit our convenience.

Strangely, though, the earth began to wobble only in the first decade of this century; there was no slowing up before then. One might have understood more easily had the wobble started since the last war. Any heavenly body could be excused if it staggered a bit with all those nuclear confusions going on.

At least when atomic bursts began to clutter the space lanes we were prone to blame them for bad weather, although not crediting them for unexpected good weather.

There may be more to our world than we imagine, of course. It may have more perception than we suspect. It may have had forewarning of the advents of Communism and Hitler, respectively.

Both these upsurges were enough to make any self-respecting world wobble.

Or, as we noted at the beginning, it may simply be emulating the tardiness of its population, who are frequently much more than 31 seconds late for anything.

Albert Einstein said that when you sit with a nice girl for two hours, you think it's only a minute; but when you sit on a hot stove for a minute, you think it's two hours.

He was explaining relativity. Time too, as it happens.

In the "experience of duration" a 31-second delay is a mere nothing, so the earth's wobble needn't alarm us unduly. Indeed if we only had the earth per se to worry about roses might bloom in our mental gardens for ever.

Reports from Ottawa

SOME of the more brassy segments of private radio are sprouting out in what is for them a very odd ball direction. They are "reporting in depth" on national and international affairs, with unsponsored interviews and talks.

Two of the stations in this category are operated by Jack Kent Cooke, the Toronto entrepreneur who got a frosty reception from the Board of Broadcast Governors a year ago over the quality of his stations' programming. Cooke admitted frankly that what people want is news, sports and rock'n-roll—and that's what he gives them.

Now the Cooke stations here and in Toronto are carrying a half hour of news commentaries, talks and news features each night at a cost probably of a few hundred dollars a week. For private radio that's not chickenfeed.

This innovation came soon after announcement that the House of Commons committee on broadcasting will inquire into the activities of privately-owned radio and television. Last session the committee concentrated on the CBC and gave the CBC every rough time indeed.

Another Ottawa station that has heaped up its listening fare is Frank Ryan's CFRA. Ryan is a very astute broadcaster whom I first encountered in the 1945 election campaign. The occasion was a big Liberal rally in the Ottawa Auditorium, in honor of Mackenzie King. Ryan leaped to the front of the stage and led the cheering for the prime minister.

A spokesman at CFRA reports that the station will be applying to the Board of Broadcast Governors for the one television channel available for private TV in Ottawa. The BBG has made it clear that quality of programming will be an important factor in all its TV licence decisions.

Three Conservative members of Parliament and the executive assistant of Newfoundland cabinet minister W. J. Browne are currently helping CFRA improve its program content. Each evening except Sunday one of the four goes on Ryan's station for five minutes to comment on the news in Parliament.

The four Tory commentators, all of whom have had extensive radio experience, are Bob McCleave and Ed Morris, MPs for Halifax; Heath MacQuarrie, MP for Queens, P.E.I.; and ministerial aide Art Harnett.

A number of stations, like Montreal's CFCE, take telephoned and taped-and-mailed reports from press, gallery reporters here. Former Canadian Press staffer Sam Ross has been covering Ottawa for about a year for the All-Canada radio group. Toronto's CFRB is launching a nightly parliamentary news capsule by its own man in Ottawa.

Hamilton's CHCH-TV has teamed up with the Canadian Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters to put able young newsman Jeff Scott in Ottawa to film-interview newsmakers. Scott has been concentrating on cabinet ministers and MPs and—perhaps not quite coincidentally—making friends who count for private radio-TV. An exclusive Scott interview with Prime Minister Diefenbaker was telecast over 13 stations.

It all adds up to a curious but encouraging phenomenon, as well as an intriguing development with fear of the Commons committee and hope for TV licences mixed up in the motivation.

It isn't likely that the dosage will become heavy enough to drive away many listeners to the CBC. But it will be all to the good if those with rock'n-roll mentality become even dimly aware that other things than love and a buck help make the world go round.

INTERVIEWS with a couple of dozen friends who live in that area of Ontario that was recently visited by two ice storms reveals that the most unnerving experience was not the revelation of their complete and helpless dependence upon electricity. That was bad enough: no light, no heat, no cooking, no hot water, no appliances; in some thousands of cases, no telephone.

As one former army staff officer said:

"We can now imagine the situation if enemy bombs or even enemy fifth column sabotage were to knock out the few sources of electric power. Apart from any other results, the whole country would be domestically paralyzed."

However, it was not such reflections as this that were the most mentioned. It was the TV shut-off in families that included children.

"It was staggering," these friends said. "We had not the faintest idea of the extent to which TV has usurped the home. The children were practically unmanageable without it. Their complaints, tantrums, were close to hysterical."

"How did parents control children before the advent of TV? How did they entertain them? What did they give them to do? How did they keep them quiet?"

Well, if I remember rightly, they weren't kept quiet.

Let Youth Have a Chance

(From The Windsor Star)

RECENTLY we chatted with a man who made no pretence of being an expert in foreign affairs. But he had a home-made theory of what is wrong with them. The men in charge are too old.

This chap had just entered the pensionable age himself. He thought that if he were old enough to receive a pension from ordinary work, then statesmen with their tremendous burdens also should be retired at the same age. He admitted he himself was not the man he once was.

"The old fellows have had their chance. They have failed to settle the problems of the world. It is time for younger men with newer ideas and more flexible attitudes," he philosophized.

Washington Angle

Nixon, the Formidable

By MARQUIS CHILDS

IF there is any Democrat still harboring the slightest doubt that Richard Nixon will be a formidable opponent in November, he or she should now be completely disabused.

The speech Nixon delivered in Chicago is the charter of his campaign, and while it may be possible to force him off the high road, the themes he enunciated for Republicans at their $100-a-plate dinner are those he will sound again and again into November.

It is not merely that he embraces President Eisenhower and seeks to share the cloak of his personal popularity. That was all along obviously his principal play.

But even as he points with pride to the record of the administration—and there is no pointer with pride who puts more vehemence into his work than the vice-president—he promises more. The pledge to the critics and the doubters is that a new Republican administration will "build even greater accomplishments in the future."

This is a shrewd appeal. In education, are classrooms inadequate, teachers underpaid and standards flabby? Very well, then we will strive to eliminate these evils.

There is too much chronic unemployment and, under "obsolete farm programs," the prices farmers receive continue to go down while taxes to subsidize them go up. We will give these problems, says Nixon, the highest legislative priority.

This is the line, too, on the current controversy over defence and the "deterrent lag." No aggressor in the world today can knock out the deterrent striking power of the United States and Mr. Khrushchev knows it. That is the ringing Nixon challenge to those who would "sell America short."

But, in the same breath, he asks for constructive criticism and a searching month-to-month re-examination of military capabilities.

If this is having your cake and eating it, too, then that is precisely what Nixon means to do throughout the campaign. With casual humor, he dismisses the Democratic attacks on him as he speaks to groups in hotel lobbies, at receptions and wherever they are assembled, missing not a single opportunity.

His determination is to treat all personal attacks in this fashion. Sooner or later his attackers may sting him and he can come angrily charging out, as he has done in the past. But the present stance of cool superiority as the opposition peppers him with bad names gives him a distinct advantage. A calculating operator, he will not relinquish it lightly.

Stopping in New York on the way out here, he was awarded the Order of St. Sebastian by the Catholic war veterans. There is in the Nixon now on display at least a touch of St. Sebastian, who welcomed the arrows of his martyrdom with such unshaken confidence.

What makes Richard run may be simply ambition. The ingredients are not evident to the casual observer. With the exception of his wife, he has really no close confidantes.

He is alone, and if it were not for the aura of genial goodwill that he generates in crowds, he would seem lonely. There is every reason to believe that he writes his own speeches, putting them together with his own shrewd sense of where he is going and how. His aides speak with slightly-veiled scorn of the staff of 70 Gov. Nelson Rockefeller still holds in readiness should Nixon fall on his face.

But whatever the sources of his drive, it is formidable. Leaving a golf writers' banquet in New York, where he was the perfect sports fan, a good-natured dub among the experts, his aides told him it was essential to fly at once to Chicago, since weather might close in the airport later and prevent him from keeping the all-important engagement here.

Nixon immediately shifted his plans and, without a murmur, gave up, as it turned out, a night's sleep. In his chartered plane, we put down at Detroit for a fuel stop, groped through heavy overcast and freezing rain over Chicago, made for an alternative landing in Cleveland—and finally, turning back to Chicago, found a way down through the weather. The flight took altogether six hours. The next morning, after four hours of sleep, he could joke about his experience with Republican as bagpipes shrilled in the hotel lobby.

The Democrats may be able to unhorse this determined rider. But his armor—peace, the best seven years of your lives—is impressive. And they will have to do more than name-calling if they are to succeed.

From the Scriptures

And their eyes were opened and they knew him.—St. John 24:31.

Letters to the Editor

A Different Thing

Last Friday, at the Bar Association luncheon, Mr. Justice Thorson was quoted as saying that the new B.C. Trade-Unions Act was unduly restrictive to "freedom of association."

Checking back in the press I find that the learned judge actually is reported as saying last September the following:

"The right of free assembly has been threatened in at least three Canadian provinces."

On further questioning, he added: "British Columbia's Trade-Unions Act (Bill 43) is unduly restrictive. It limits the right of organized labor to free assembly and free speech. I am unequivocally opposed to any such measures." A very different thing!

It was easy for the luncheon speaker to cope with the words "freedom of association" because that is not the problem in this act. It does specifically limit the right to free assembly and communication, persuasion and information in sections 3 and 4.

Citizens Aroused

The B.C. Electric and city council may not have helped themselves in their attitude regarding Thetis Lake Park, but they have unintentionally been of great service to the city and to all of British Columbia.

They have furthered the cause of parkland preservation by arousing the citizenry to greater understanding and increased awareness of its parklands.

The editorials of both papers, the articles, columns and the letters have kept the refrain on key. The one continuous note from all sides has been, as so well expressed by Mr. A. R. Davidson, "Leave It Alone"; and explained and amplified by Dr. William Newton, retired head of the Dominion Experimental Farm, in his letter ending, "Surely the mayor and council will see fit to preserve our Thetis Lake Park in its entirety as a sacred trust."

Is it now perhaps likely that there will be forthcoming a great tangible means of supplying this park with the necessary maintenance and protection satisfactory to all those concerned with the well-being of the people—and of the park for the people?

Man Cheats Death In Snow Disaster

WINDERMERE, B.C. (CP)

James Duke was gently lifted from inside an avalanche of snow here Sunday after being buried for more than 26 hours, and his first question as he was helped onto a stretcher was:

"Did someone remember to feed and water my dog?"

Duke, 60, a highways department employee for the last six years, suffered extreme exhaustion and a few minor cuts. "I could see daylight through the snow, and knew when it was night and the men left," Duke said in an interview. "I knew the fellows would be back but the night was long."

Early Sunday, rescuers jabbed the slide with long poles. Each time they struck something solid, a bulldozer came in to dig.

Operator Lloyd Rodniger missed the trapped man by feet and stopped his bulldozer when Duke waved a hand through the surface of the snow.

A chinook is believed to have caused Saturday's slide.

Nation-Wide Job Council Labor's Aim

OTTAWA (UPI)—The Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labor yesterday urged the cabinet to create a national council to probe economic unrest and recommend means of increasing employment.

The council of federal, provincial, labor, management, farm and consumer representatives would replace inquiry commissions, the Quebec unionists said.

It would "rouse the consciences of individuals, groups and governments" on economic issues. One result might be fuller unemployment statistics, including number of registered jobless and money lost through unemployment.

SULTAN OF ZANZIBAR ... not amused

Kenya Talks

Sultan Draws The Line

LONDON (AP)—The Sultan of Zanzibar has reached out from his spice-scented island to make his presence felt in the Kenya constitutional talks here.

And when the Sultan, a bearded patriarch of great dignity, makes his wishes known he expects people to listen. He came to his throne in 1911, making him the world's senior reigning monarch. In two world wars he stood by Britain. Now, as far as this 80-year-old Arab leader is concerned, the rising tide of African nationalism can leave his property alone.

Most of Kenya is a British colony. But a rich coastal protectorate, 10 miles wide and 200 miles long, represents the Sultan's mainland holdings.

The talks were called to recommend ways of advancing self-government in Kenya. Tom Mboya, leader of an all-Negro delegation, demanded that the coastal strip be incorporated in Kenya.

The Sultan, with the long name of Seyyid Sir Khalifa Bin Karub Bin Thwain, was not amused.

COUNTER-CLAIMS

He demanded a minister in the Kenya cabinet and a voice in the protectorate's future status.

British officials know the Sultan, who likes to drive around Zanzibar Island in a big red car, is keeping a close watch on the proceedings.

One said: "His Highness is a man who believes in progress—he once even made a visit to Britain in a submarine. But he also knows what belongs to him."

Behind the Teenage Curtain

Lax Parents Should Foot Bill

By Alec Merriman

If parents who shun their responsibility in raising youngsters were made to pay board for their children in industrial school or foster homes, they might pay more attention to their upbringing.

Few magistrates and juvenile court judges exercise their right to make parents pay board for children in reform school. In fact it is almost never done.

Consequently some parents look upon reform schools as most as baby-sitters—a place to send their children to avoid the cost of raising them.

Don't Bother

Some parents don't even bother to show up when their children appear in court. Then a representative of the provincial welfare department or family and children's service has to be on hand to protect the youngster's rights and act as guardian.

Provision is often made for parents to pay for a child's care in a foster home, but all too often they get away with defaulting.

Ethics Issue

It would seem that these days to many parents and children, it is what one can get away with, rather than what is right.

"There is scientific evidence to support my amateur opinion that one can spot these problems coming," says Attorney-General Robert Bonner.

Wrong End

"By the time the province is brought into the picture (juvenile courts, foster homes and correctional institutions) action is being applied at the wrong end of the problem."

Saanich Police Chief Bert Pearson maintains that if during a child's formative years healthy relations between the child and family can be worked out, the child will never become a delinquent.

"In a few instances we run across where parents are of such mental makeup they are not responsible, some arrangement of foster care should be made so the child has an opportunity of leading a normal life," he says.

He believes schools, which have direct contact with children, should spot trouble in a child's first or second year at school.

Wishy-Washy

"There are many people who believe juveniles are protected too much and that the age which they must come under juvenile court is too old at 18. Many think it should be dropped to 16 years.

"It is a wishy-washy idea to protect youths of 16 and over under the Juvenile Act," says Sidney juvenile court judge Denzil Ashby.

'Not for Boy'

Think of a boy in court at 17 years of age who has been out of school for a couple of years earning his own living. He comes up in juvenile court for driving through a stop sign and has to be accompanied by his guardian or one of his parents," he says. "Eighteen is all right for a girl, but not for a boy."

Third Court

Saanich Chief Pearson doesn't approve of reducing the age from 18 to 16, but he does think there should be some sort of intermediate court to deal with 16-to-21-year-old offenders.

Officials of the attorney-general's department agree with the age of girls being set at 18, but have an open mind

No Power

Federal laws leave it to provincial discretion as to whether age of juveniles should be considered 16, 17 or 18. In Ontario it is 16, Saskatchewan 16, Manitoba 18, and in Alberta, girls 18 and boys 16.

The provincial government has no power at the moment, and would like to have, to switch juveniles from industrial schools to jails, except for a section of the Juvenile Delinquents Act which is difficult to use.

Rape, Murder

Because of that, when a 17-year-old appears on a serious charge, such as murder or rape, officials try to get him moved to adult court. Otherwise there is a situation where murderers and rapists are mixing with 10-11-12- and 13-year-olds, and when they reach 21 they have to be released upon outgrowing the industrial school.

Probation officers are against lowering the age. They observe that, in many cases, youngsters can benefit from the treatment in juvenile court, which sometimes is much more drastic than in a magistrate's court, especially for juvenile traffic offenders, who they say should be carefully considered and treated like any other delinquent who presents a behavior problem, or is a menace to the community.

The equally important safeguard to youth in the form of contributing charges against adults would also be partially sacrificed.

Cost of Queen's Bust

'Quibbling' Hotly Denied

A Saanich councillor last night indignantly denied that his municipality had ever quibbled over the cost of Greater Victoria's royal tour bust of Queen Elizabeth.

Coun. Leslie Passmore pointed out that some accounts of the confusion which surrounds the bust by city sculptress Peggy Walton Packard had charged the Greater Victoria municipalities with quibbling over its cost.

"We have never quibbled," he said hotly.

"We agreed to pay whatever our share was."

And he added, "If Victoria council can't decide where to put the bust I suggest we give it to the provincial government so it can be put up in the new courthouse."

Last week Victoria council decided to give the bust temporary sanctuary at city hall until it can decide whether or not to go ahead with the original plan to place it in Beacon Hill Park. (See Page 11.)

Esquimalt Rejects Bid For Rezoning

Esquimalt council last night rejected a bid for rezoning of a section of the industrial reserve on Devonshire Road.

Coun. G. K. Sammon said it would be difficult for the applicant to understand why his request for rezoning to two-family dwelling was turned down when other homes exist in the area.

"We have enough trouble with houses in industrial areas," said Reeve A. C. Wurtie.

The reeve was strongly backed by Coun. Vincent Rush who said "this is one of few areas left that are handy to railway trackage... we would be wrong not to keep it for industrial use."

In other council business: Approval was given for purchase of $7,000 worth of Government of Canada bonds at 5 1/2 per cent interest, returnable Oct. 1, 1962. The funds are being invested out of the sewer loan sinking fund.

Endorsement was given to a city council resolution calling for the continuation of a resident judge of the supreme court for the Victoria area.

Council Looked at Gift Horse And Didn't Like What It Saw

Saanich council last night looked at a gift horse in the mouth and didn't like what it saw.

Only brief discussion preceded a decision that Saanich will not deprive Victoria of the dubious distinction of holding title to 365-acre Mount Douglas Park.

Saanich was asked to consider whether it would accept the park at a recent meeting of the Victoria-Saanich joint parks and beaches committee.

Reeve George Chatterton pointed out that the park deed requires that the area remain a public recreation area in perpetuity regardless of ownership, and that its acceptance by Saanich would end Victoria's contributions towards its maintenance and improvement.

He termed it "a strictly regional park" as opposed to parks used chiefly by Saanich residents.

Last night council also:

- Awarded an $11,166 contract for a new municipal yard warehouse to low bidder M. P. Paine Co.
- Increased garbage collection fees from $6 a year per home to $6.75.
- Referred a request that it take action on a plan to create a Greater Victoria family and juvenile court to the intermunicipal committee for additional information.

• Postponed action on a rezoning bid which would give Shelbourne Street its eighth service station in a single mile.

• Referred to its advisory planning commission a rezoning application designed to make way for a Cadboro Bay shopping centre planned by Mr. and Mrs. G. Garnons-Williams.

• Requested Comptroller John Tribe to prepare a report on the possibility of instituting weekly garbage collection next year with individual charges based on assessment.

Little Girl Hit by Car 'Satisfactory'

A three-year-old girl who suffered head injuries when she was struck by a car at 4.55 p.m. yesterday was in satisfactory condition last night at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Eileen French, 1909 Birch Street, was running across Richmond Road about 75 feet north of Birch when she was struck by a car driven by Martozie A. Martens, 1874 Carnarvon, said police.

Faith Urged For Democracy

VANCOUVER (CP)—Canada needs to discover a "new burning faith" in the principles of democracy, Rev. William Hills of Victoria told the Advertising and Sales Bureau of the Vancouver Board of Trade Monday.

The working man and management should realize if they lose faith in the democratic system they are making themselves available for a new kind of tyranny, said Mr. Hills, rector of St. George The Martyr church.

What's a Daisy Worth?

Because "you have to put a value on a daisy" to take legal action against those who break the rules at Thetis Lake, the city may seek special legislation next year to tighten its control.

City Solicitor T. P. O'Grady advised city council parks committee yesterday that although it's too late this year—Victoria should be able to obtain the legislation next year enabling the watershed property to be treated as a park as far as enforcement of laws is concerned.

Now, parks administrator W. H. Warren said, "If someone picks a flower, you have to go after him in a civil way, and place a value on the flower to go before a judge and obtain compensation. You have to declare the value of the daisy."

January Dip Was Worst On Record

NEW YORK (UPI)—Stocks met support, starting off a month traders hope will be just the opposite of January. The list last month made the sharpest decline for any initial month on record, dropping prices to the levels of last summer.

Motors, electronics, steels and chemicals, the biggest losers last month, led the advance. A good January production report helped lift Chrysler more than a point. Ford and Studebaker-Packard rose around 1 each. Youngstown rose about 2 and Republic more than 1 in a firm steel section. Union Carbide paced chemicals with a rise of more than 3. Du Pont tacked on about a point. Westinghouse rose more than 1.

Electronic featured gains of more than 2 points in Texas Instruments and Motorola, and more than a point in IBM and Litton. Standard Oil (Indiana) rose more than a point in a steady oil section.

Industrials Rally

TORONTO (CP)—The stock market, strengthened by a climbing industrial index, advanced higher amid light, dull trading. Southam Company led industrial winners with a two-point gain at 87, followed by Steel Company of Canada, which moved ahead 1 1/2 at 80 1/2. Aluminum was ahead 1/2 at 30 1/2. On the losing side International Paper was the heaviest loser with a 2 1/2-point drop at 100 1/2. Eddy Paper slipped 1/2 at 62, as did Algonia Steel at 36 1/2.

Nickel Moves Up

MONTREAL (CP)—Losses in papers were shown by Abitibi, down 1/2 at 37 1/2. Anglo Newfoundland 1/2 at 7 1/2. Consolidated 1/2 at 40 1/2. Howard Smith 1/2 at 44. International 1/2 at 11 1/2. Price 1 at 42. Fraser gained 1/2 at 27 and Powell River rose 1/2 at 17 1/2. In base metals International Nickel was up 2 at 100 1/2. Aluminum up 1/2 at 30 1/2 and Noranda up 1/2 at 45 1/2. Hudson Bay was down 1/2 at 50 1/2.

Coppers Weaken

VANCOUVER—Weakness developed in coppers with Bethlehem at 67 cents; Cowichan at 62 cents and Craigmont at 3.60. Torwest was fairly active at 17 cents. Barlone at 5.40 was strong among golds.

Egg Market

INDUSTRIALS were not greatly changed. Macmillan was 16 1/2; B.C. Power 34 1/2 and Canadian Collieries at 39 1/2. Woodward's strengthened to 17 1/2. Pipelines were generally dull and lower.

Grain Market

WINNIPEG (CP)—Most prices showed a somewhat easier tone in slow trade. There was some activity in barley and flax. Flax prices were irregular and there was evidence of selling from American sources. Barley trade showed buying by shippers, some of it in connection with domestic orders.

Rye prices eased with selling prompted by weakness in United States markets. There was some recovery from the day's low levels. Flax—Open High Low Close. May 20 1/2 20 1/2 20 1/2 20 1/2. Chicago (AP)—The grain future market slipped well into weakness with numerous contracts of major fractions to 2 cents a bushel. The only steadiness most of the day was in new crop wheat and soybeans. Rye had losses running to around 2 cents at times. Old crop soybeans and March wheat slipped about a cent.

London Stock Prices

LONDON (Reuters)—The stock market tended to ease but gilt-edged securities were supported and showed widespread gains. Steels, leading oils and engineering shares were generally dull, but textiles were mainly better. Rubber shares were in demand.

His Ways Hard to Understand

Puzzling Mr. Fleming

Bargain Bonds Offered By Finance Minister

By HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor
The ways of Finance Minister Fleming are sometimes hard to understand. Yesterday he offered $100,000,000 of the popular 5 1/2 per cent bonds at what looked to be 1.5 per cent below the market.

Last Friday these 5 1/2 per cent bonds, which mature in 1960, but which may be extended at the holders' option to 1975, were selling at $100.40, and were clearly booked for higher ground. What did Mr. Fleming do? He reopened the sale of these bonds for another $100,000,000 and priced them on the bargain counter at 99 1/2.

BIG SURPRISE

The move took the experts by surprise, and for a time the bond market was thrown into confusion. The existing 5 1/2 per cent of 1962 were marked down from 100 1/2 to the government's new asking price of 99 1/2, while the rest of the bond market held steady. Then investors seemed to realize that this was something too good to miss. The new bonds went smartly to a premium of 25 cents, and other short-term advances up to 40 cents.

MISCALCULATED

Some financial experts believe that Mr. Fleming once again miscalculated the market, and that the new bonds could have been sold quite readily at par or better. Nobody seems to know why Mr. Fleming consistently lacks confidence in the market for his bonds. Each successive offering outdoes its predecessor in giving something "extra" away, with the result that Mr. Fleming is himself putting the chief damper on the Canadian bond market.

OPEN TO CRITICISM

If this is an anti-inflationary measure it may carry merit, but in giving investors long-term options on bonds with normal interest rates, Mr. Fleming is open to criticism. In addition to adding $100,000,000 to the amount of the 5 1/2 per cent of 1962, Mr. Fleming is offering $200,000,000 of a new 5 1/2 per cent issue which will give the holders an option in 1963 of exchanging into similar bonds in April. Of these $329,000,000 maturing in 1976. These bonds are to be offered as a conversion of part Bank of Canada or government of the 2 1/2 per cent maturing agencies.

Expected Canadians to Be Rougher

Body Check Part of Game

WINNIPEG (UPI)—The Canadian brand of hockey may be rougher than the Russian style, but according to at least one Russian star it isn't as rough as expected.

Boris Mairov, a 21-year-old left winger on the Moscow Select hockey team that is winding up a Canadian tour, explained, "a body check is just part of the game and I expected the Canadian players to be rougher than they have been."

All games on the tour have been played under international rules.

Team manager Stanislav Melentiev added, "We're pretty active ourselves."

The Selects, many of whom are of junior age, Sunday trounced the Winnipeg Warriors Junior All-Stars 8-1. The Russians play in Calgary Wednesday, the last game of the tour.

Melentiev grinned when he said the Russians have had to adapt themselves to the rougher Canadian style. "But we don't practice roughness when developing our players," he quickly added.

The team manager, who works for a sports organization in Moscow, would not make a prediction on the outcome of the forthcoming Olympic Games competition at Squaw Valley. "But the Canadian team should be very strong," he said.

A few of the players from the Select team will join the Russian Olympic aggregation after their Canadian tour.

Melentiev said it was only natural for the Russians to want to be on an even keel with Canada as far as hockey ability was concerned. "Poor is a soldier who does not want to be a general," he said.

No Decision Yet On Queen's Bust

The bust of Queen Elizabeth by sculptor Peggy Walton Packard will have a sojourn of at least two weeks at city hall.

Parks committee of city council couldn't make up its mind yesterday what to do about it.

"Let's bring it to city hall and wait for a better idea to come in," suggested Ald. Mrs. Lily Wilson.

"I don't see that we can," said Ald. M. H. Mooney, pointing out that other municipalities were contributing to the cost on the understanding it was to be in Beacon Hill Park, and "we should live by what we agree to."

But he agreed to table the

"They are treating it like the Community Chest, as something that should be contributed to on a voluntary basis," he said. "It is the responsibility of Canada and B.C. to build their universities, whether at Point Grey, Mt. Tolmie or Gordon Head."

FULFIL PLEDGE

"Let the government fulfil the premier's 1958 pledge with regard to a matching grant and let UBC spend what money may be necessary to give Victoria University the buildings it so desperately needs. Then let the present fund-raising drive here be for a University of British Columbia, no matter where it may be located."

Elaborating on his statement later, Mr. Gregory said there has been too much rivalry between UBC and Victoria University.

FULL ARTS COURSE

"We should consider Victoria University and UBC as two branches of the same institution," he said. "Of course, the Victoria branch couldn't be expected to offer all the courses available at UBC, but there is no reason why it can't offer a full arts course."

Mr. Gregory also took a caustic look at the provincial civil defence setup; advocated abolition of the sales tax on meals; and was mildly critical of service offered by Trans-Canada Air Lines.

Speaking of TCA, Mr. Gregory called the line "a smart outfit."

DROPPED HINT

"A year ago it dropped a hint it might discontinue the triangle run between Victoria, Seattle and Vancouver. It wasn't long before everyone was praising the magnificent service they had been wholeheartedly condemning for 10 years, and urging the run be continued."

He told of speaking to an official of an American line who expressed his amazement that 28 seats could be put on a DC3, as TCA does, and added that the line has put 11 rows in Viscounts where only 10 were intended.

TRIANGLE RUN

"Let us keep TCA on the triangle run," he urged, "but don't let TCA think they can put just anything on the run and call it first-class."

Inadequacy of present civil defence plans in the province came under fire from the Victoria MLA, especially plans supposedly being made to evacuate people to outlying areas in case of emergency.

TOO FEW PEOPLE

"Too few people in B.C. take civil defence seriously," he said.

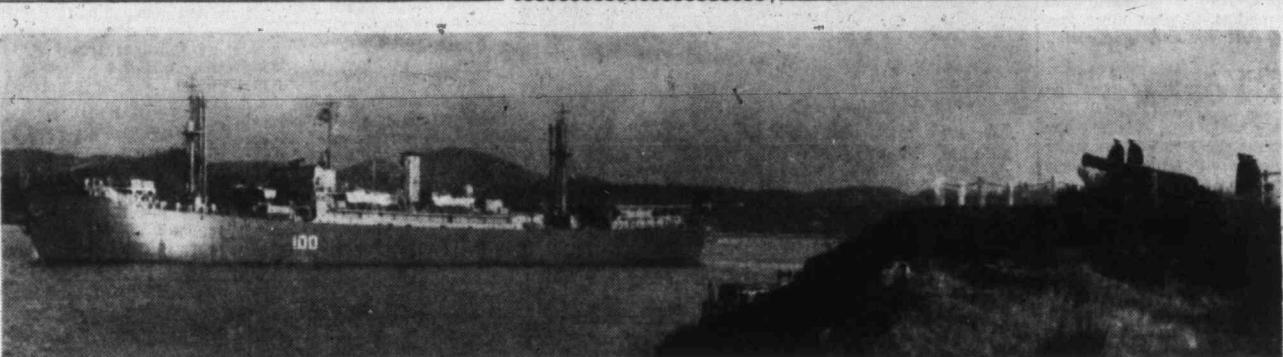

"I regret to say I have a cottage in Saanich and I haven't heard a squeak from anybody saying I should put in supplies for people who may have to evacuate Victoria. If there has been so much as a case of beans put aside to care for these people, I will be very much surprised."

matter until the committee's next meeting in two weeks. "We might get some good ideas by then," Ald. Wilson said.

Storm Front Moving Out

A Pacific weather system which moved in on the B.C. coast last week bringing heavy rains, flash floods and gale force winds, to parts of Vancouver Island is now showing its heels to this area.

A federal government meteorologist said yesterday the tail end of a series of weather disturbances is continuing through this area but is not rain-bearing.

Council Will Hear Board

Mayor Cool to Idea Of Teaching by TV

Meeting Feb. 17

Finance committee will recommend that city council listen to a school board explanation before saying yes or no to a proposed closed-circuit television system at S. J. Willis Junior High School.

"If we met them," said Mayor Percy Scurrell, "perhaps they could sell us on the idea. But I say our taxpayers are in no position to experiment."

DISCUSS BUDGET

Council representatives will meet the school board Feb. 17 to discuss the board's 1960 budget and the matter will be taken up then.

The board asked for city approval of spending $17,500 of a $35,000 surplus from its No. 2 building program for a television studio at S. J. Willis, and a closed-circuit system in the school. The board has indicated one instructor would be able to give lectures and demonstrations to four classes simultaneously.

EXTRAORDINARY

But judging from finance committee's attitude, the board will have to do an extraordinary selling job.

"Why should we be the guinea pig for the rest of the province?" said the mayor. "I don't think our taxpayers are in a position to experiment. ... Lots of things are desirable that we can't afford."

DOLORES UPTON

... missing since Sunday

Girl Left for Walk And Never Returned

Mrs. Mary Upton, 2787 Richmond, has enlisted police aid in seeking her daughter, Dolores, missing from home since 2 p.m. Sunday.

Dolores Upton, 17, left home after telling her mother she was "going for a walk to the waterfront, and would be back about 4:30 or 5 p.m."

A bus driver who drove her downtown told her mother he'd seen the girl on Yates Street about an hour later, around 3 p.m. Sunday. Nothing further has been seen or heard from the girl.

"I can't understand it," Mrs. Upton told the Colonist yesterday afternoon. "There was no trouble at home, or at school. She had no money with her, for meals or for travel, and she was not wearing any of her newer things."

The girl is described as five feet, five inches tall, 120 pounds with dark blonde hair, grey-green eyes and fair complexion.

When she left home she was

Strachan Charges:

'Consumers Exploited By Big Corporations'

Demands Public Review

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan yesterday told the legislature the people of British Columbia are being exploited by big business at the consumer level.

"The pricing practices of our major corporations and those who set the standard of living must be publicly reviewed," he declared.

"Our governments—federal and provincial—have failed to understand the times in which we live and the need for new policies to solve new problems," he charged. "There is a change needed in economic conditions where people are exploited. We now have a controlled society all over North America."

He charged that because trade unionism has been so successful, "those who control our economy had to go about it another way:

EXPLOITATION

"Light bulbs don't last as long as usual. This is deliberate."

"Why, when a wife buys whipping cream, doesn't it whip?"

"Apples are 15 cents to 30 cents a pound at the consumer level, but the farmer gets 30 cents a 40-pound box."

"Drug companies get $15 for pills that cost 30 cents to make."

"This is exploitation at the consumer level," he charged.

ORGANIZED

"We now have a system of organized irresponsibility. They think all we have to do is produce," he said.

In his one-and-a-half-hour speech to lead the Opposition's attack on the throne speech, the CCF leader tackled the 105 paragraphs in the throne speech, paragraph by paragraph.

He concluded his speech with a vote of non-confidence in the government which charged the government failed to provide adequate leadership in the development of provincial economy; made no provision for the promotion of better labor-management relations; failed to provide for orderly development of power and other natural resources; had not adequately met the crises in school financing; and had failed to take the necessary action to protect farmers against rising costs and less of markets.

STEADY HIT

Mr. Strachan lost his non-confidence motion 31-13, with Social Credit voting as a solid block and the CCF, two Liberal members and Independent Labor member Tom Uphill voting together.

Mr. Strachan was critical of Agriculture Minister Newton Steacy's handling of the Milky Way Dairy of Saanich and its problem concerning cartons which contain two American gallons, instead of two imperial gallons.

RESPONSIBILITY

"I personally believe milk should be sold in standard containers, but once a government has led this group of farmers ... to believe it was all right to use these cartons, the government has a responsibility," Mr. Strachan said.

"That is to allow them to continue, or to give them the necessary assistance to convert to standard-size containers," he said.

Mr. Strachan said labor was not to blame for rising costs and quoted from company annual reports to prove it. "The Powell River Company shows about $1 profit for every $1 paid in wages," he claimed.

Pipeline Contractors Here Feb. 25

A welcome by Mayor Percy Scurrell and a speech by B.C. Mines Minister Kenneth Kierland will be highlights of a three-day convention of the Pipe Line Contractors' Association of Canada which opens Feb. 25 at the Empress Hotel.

Blood Needed

Target set at 800 pints, the Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic is opening a three-day session today at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort. Clinic will be open for donors daily from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., and from 7 to 9:30 p.m. today, Wednesday and Thursday.

Court Revision

$35-a-Day Board Cuts Hours

A provincially-appointed court of revision on assessments in the Greater Victoria school district is shortening its working day this year, city council finance committee was told yesterday, but not the fees the municipalities must pay.

The three members of the court, sitting in Victoria city today for the first time, are J. G. McIntosh, Waldo Skillings and Joseph Casey.

$35 A DAY

Last year they sat morning and afternoon for $35 a day each. This year, City Comptroller Dennis Young told the committee, they plan to sit in the mornings only for the same fee.

"It's only right and proper to ask them to reconsider, the chairman and the provincial government department that appoints them," suggested Ald. Hugh Ramsay.

"Well, that's fine," said Mayor Percy Scurrell. "I think it's a waste of time, but go ahead."

Victoria-Saanich

Panhandle-Parks Trade Suggested

Ald. Hugh Ramsay suggested yesterday that Saanich consider trading its Lansdowne "panhandle" for the city's Mount Douglas and Elk-Beaver Lakes parks.

Reeve George Chatterton of Saanich said at the weekend that his municipality might be accordingly—trade the panhandle, for instance—that would make something that might be quite worth considering.

Missing historic plaque was left by mailbox of H. T. Matson, 2561 Queenswood, yesterday morning after Sunday's Colonist told of its disappearance from Matson family home. Whoever took the plaque, after reading investigation had started, returned it undamaged.—(Colonist photo.)

Plaque Back Mysteriously

An historic plaque, whose disappearance was noted in Sunday's Colonist, yesterday was mysteriously returned to its owner.

The plaque, which was displayed in Mount Adelaide, the old Matson family home torn down last fall to make way for a Salvation Army home for the aged, was left in the driveway of the home of H. T. Matson, 2561 Queenswood Drive.

Mrs. Matson found it at 10:15 a.m. propped up against the mailbox at the end of the driveway. It was apparently undamaged.

Mr. Matson himself drove away from his home past the spot where the plaque was found at about 9:35 a.m. and swears that the plaque wasn't there then.

"I couldn't have missed it," he told the Colonist last night. "The driveway is very narrow and anyway the plaque is too big to miss in that position."

Weight of the plaque—five feet five inches long by 20½ inches deep, carved from heavy wood—meant that its return in broad daylight was a big chance to take," said Mr. Matson.

Now that he has the plaque once more in safe-keeping, however, he isn't disposed to look further into the matter of its disappearance.

It once occupied a place of honor over the main stairway of Mount Adelaide, a big house overlooking Victoria harbor, built in 1890 by Robert Croft for his bride, a daughter of coal baron Robert Dunsmuir.

Present plans are for the plaque to be displayed with an appropriate inscription in the Matson Sunset Home which will rise on the site of Mount Adelaide.

Speeder Reaches Dead-End

Combination of a dead-end street and police radio communication resulted in the arrest last night of a 19-year-old Victoria speeder who was charged with criminal negligence.

A 90-mile-an-hour chase by Central Saanich, Saanich and city police ended shortly before midnight on a dead-end Washington Street off the Gorge where the youth was arrested by Saanich police.

It started at Keating about 11:30 when Central Saanich Const. Frazer MacDonald attempted to stop a sports car for a routine checkup.

Police said they were doing "over 90" while following the car south along the Patricia Bay Highway and down Douglas where the chase veered right onto Dupplin, across Burnside and down Washington to the dead-end. City police, alerted by radio, were moving northwards to intercept when the chase ended.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a career woman (unmarried) and my brother is a bachelor in his late 30s. I've been living alone and hating it. He has been doing the same.

Recently the two of us decided we could cut expenses drastically and enjoy the pleasure of each other's company if we took a large apartment together. We've always gotten on well and agree on most things.

When I mentioned the possibility to some of my friends they were horrified. The more respectable acquaintances said it wouldn't look respectable and that we'd be talked about by everyone in town.

We've read your common-sense answers to other thorny problems and would appreciate your opinion.—PERPLEXED.

Dear Perplexed: There is nothing wrong with a brother and sister making a home together.

Small minds and big mouths will never cease their evil work. No one has yet devised a method of controlling gossip—but you can ignore it.

I Was Too Young

Dear Ann: When I married Thomas I was sure it was the real thing. Now I realize it was a mistake and I was too young.

I work in an office and am friendly with a co-worker who is my age. She's unhappy in her marriage, too. In short, we both want out but we have no legal grounds. Our husbands are nice guys with no bad habits. The worst that can be said about them is that they are dull.

My girl friend shares her home with her husband's brother and his wife. I can see why she might complain but I have no such problem. We need some advice.—TOO YOUNG.

Dear Too Young: Sorry the

Husband Wants Out

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 17 and was married on my 16th birthday. I'm expecting a baby any minute and need some advice badly.

My husband says he's not happy with me and wants to separate. He wants me to move into my mother's apartment so he can have our place. When I ask him what is wrong with our marriage he says it's not just one thing but lots of small things.

I don't want to separate, especially since a baby is on the way. He's 27 years old and was married once before. If he moves me over to my mother's is he responsible for the doctor bills? Please help me.—HEARTBROKEN 17.

Dear Heartbroken: You and the girls in the above letter

Tips for Parents

Tense Parent Keeps Child Silent Longer

By EDITH HENRY

As the baby grows, we are proud of his first words. Say "Bye Bye" we urge him fondly—and hopefully!

Before he talks, he has begun to coo and babble. Later out of these sounds he will fashion words, so we encourage him.

We imitate the sound he makes. He will watch, and listen, and perhaps repeat his own venture. It becomes a game which delights him.

He has established a relationship with another human being, using what he knows of a skill that it has taken man eons of time to perfect—the skill of language.

VOICE ENCOURAGEMENT

If, during this period, his mother is quiet and silent, and perhaps tense, her baby may be silent longer. A parent's soft, endearing sounds seem to be an incentive to the baby to use his own voice.

Presently he is ready for words. He picks up the names of objects quickly. He will learn best if he is spoken to simply, briefly, and clearly (no baby words). "Book—coat—come here—bring it." Sometimes we talk a child into confusion.

Nursery rhymes help the learning of words. We can repeat a line, the child saying the last word with us.

Sentences begin to appear next and the question words

"how, when, where, why?" and what's that?" Sometimes these are used to gather information. We answer them on this basis—answer them as correctly as we can!

ON HIS OWN

From now on the child proceeds with his learning more or less by himself.

It is well to remember that each child is made in his own pattern. Some children walk before they talk. Their interests seem to be in activity.

Others seem to have an urge to be sociable. They want to "get across" to others. Words help them. They talk early. A variety of additional factors contribute to this difference also.

A few children are slow at first to correlate thought and speech. We help them best by letting them find the words they want themselves rather than supplying words for them.

OLD MUSIC

The lute, a stringed instrument popular in Europe in the 16th century, originated in Iran.

What's Cooking!

Humble Potato Rich in Value

By LOUISE MOORE

No matter how humble potatoes seem, remember they are tops among vegetables and are a means of stretching the food budget. And if you are harboring the thought that potatoes are fattening—nonsense—it's the blanket of cream gravy or the golden blob of butter that sends the calories sky high. A medium-sized boiled or baked potato rates less than a hundred calories—little more than that of an apple or orange.

VITAMIN C

Potatoes supply important food elements, good reasons why we should not miss them in our everyday meals. They possess much-needed iron in goodly amount, Vitamin C and other necessary vitamins.

Careful cooking in their jackets or peeling them thinly helps to preserve those important food elements. Never soak potatoes in water. Cook only until done.

BAKED POTATOES

Choose firm, smooth potatoes of uniform size that are best for baking. Scrub, rinse and dry. Rub with oil or fat and bake on rack in centre of oven (425) 50 to 60 minutes or until tender. When done, immediately slit a cross on top and press with fingers covered with a cloth to make the inside puff.

Then fluff with a fork and add a blob of butter if not counting calories or serve with a shake of pepper, salt and paprika and you'll never miss the butter. But if you don't mind the pounds, use butter or spoon a little sour cream over top with a sprinkling of chopped chives.

SPEED BAKING

To speed baking time the potatoes may be cut in halves lengthwise, the cut sides brushed with melted fat and placed, cut side down, on baking sheet. Brush over rest of potato with oil or bacon fat and bake in hot oven (425) 30-35 minutes.

When serving a 375F oven meal, the potatoes won't come to any harm if baked at that temperature and they fit in with an oven meal perfectly.

STUFFED BAKED POTATOES

Cut a slice lengthwise from top of baked potatoes, scoop the potato out of shell, mash well or put through a ricer while hot.

Add 1 cup diced cooked ham or cooked corned beef, 2 tblsp. each, finely chopped parsley, milk, mayonnaise and melted butter with salt and pepper to taste. Refill shells and reheat long enough for filling to become piping hot and tops lightly browned.

Again, you may whip the insides and refill shells; make a nest in centre and sprinkle with salt, pepper and a little melted butter.

Break an egg into each centre and cover with cooked bits of bacon. Bake in moderate oven until egg is set and cooked to your taste.

CREAM OF POTATO SOUP

Thinly pare and dice 3 good-sized potatoes and put in pot with 1 good-sized onion sliced—peeled, of course—and 1 pint of boiling water, 1 tsp. salt and a few celery leaves. Boil until potatoes are tender. When done add the water to 1 qt. of milk.

Put potatoes through ricer or if you haven't one, mash thoroughly and add to the milk. Mix 2 tblsp. butter with 2 tblsp. flour and use to thicken the mixture, stirring until smooth. Season to taste with salt, pepper and serve with a garnish of paprika or chopped parsley.

Patients Celebrate Birthdays

Patients and friends gathered in the lounge of the Pavilion of the Veteran's Hospital to help celebrate the birthdays of Mr. H. Smethurst, aged 86, Mr. R. Hodgett, 85, and Mr. J. Mitchell, 76. Mr. George Fairfield presided at the piano and songs were enjoyed.

Mr. George Barton and Mr. Charlie Wilkins were joint masters of ceremonies.

Winners of the "beauty" contest were Mr. R. Hodgett and Mr. William Lee. Mr. Harry Parker won the bean contest. Entertainment was provided by Mrs. K. Dick, violinist and pianist, Mrs. R. Conarroe, soloist, Mrs. I. Harris and Mrs. A. Syrette.

Guests of honor received birthday cards and a small gift each, from the WA to the hospital.

A birthday cake with names and ages of the patients was cut by Miss Wooliams assisted by Mrs. A. Sabine. Tea and cake was served to all present by Mr. E. Macdonald and his assistants.

Barbara Eisenhower Starts Revolution

BOMBAY (CP)—Barbara Eisenhower, United States President Eisenhower's daughter-in-law, has been responsible for a revolution currently sweeping Katwari Sarai, a sleepy Hindu village she visited during her Indian sojourn.

Muni Ram, 81, one of Katwari Sarai's tradition-bound elders, says: "I just cannot understand what has happened. Things were so quiet until that memsahib foreign lady came here."

The reason for Ram's alarm is that his 36-year-old daughter-in-law Shanti, has not worn her veil since the day Barbara Eisenhower visited the village with Mrs. Durga Bhai Deshmukh, one of the country's leading crusaders for social reform.

Garden Notes

Salvia Gay, Prolific

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

With the possible exception of the scarlet geranium, I don't believe there is any other bedding-out plant that can compete with the various strains of Salvia or Scarlet Sage, either for brilliance of color or for non-stop performance in flowering.

The popularity of the Salvia as a bedding plant has increased considerably during the past few years and, given a reasonable amount of summer sunshine, a bed of these plants will light up the garden like a neon sign. Salvia is not a very good mixer and never looks its best in a bed of mixed flowers but, grouped together in a bold mass, it can be guaranteed to stop traffic.

In common with most of our popular bedding-out plants, the Salvia is easily raised from seed. If you plan on raising your own, it is absolutely necessary to have plenty of light. A greenhouse, a coldframe with a soil-heating cable, a glassed-in sun porch or a few big south-facing windows will be required to bring along enough Salvia seedlings to furnish a fair-sized flower bed.

Of the various strains of Salvia splendens in cultivation, Pride of Zurich and Scarlet Queen are old favorites. They have one annoying fault--the plants vary tremendously in height, so it is difficult to get the uniformity so necessary in formal bedding schemes.

Of recent years, the efforts of the plant breeders have been directed along the lines of securing this uniformity in height and developing an early-flowering habit, and it is possible to buy seeds which will produce a whole seed flat full of plants as alike as a regiment of guards and which will bloom continuously from June to October.

Among these new varieties, the earliest to bloom and the shortest in height is St. John's Fire. The flowers are an unusually rich and brilliant scarlet and the foliage is a very dark green, making a most pleasing contrast. The plants all grow to a uniform height of 10 inches. Slightly taller and a bit later to bloom is Blaze of Fire, 15 inches, and Bonfire, about 24 inches.

All the Salvias are not scarlet, however. Salvia patens bears extra-large flowers of the clearest indigo blue and quite different in form from the red types, the flowers being broad, tubular and lipped. Salvia farinacea--Blue Bedder--bears long spikes of Wedgewood-blue, growing about two feet in height, with delightful silvery foliage.

Seeds of all these varieties will germinate readily if sown in pots or boxes of rather sandy soil and held at a temperature of around 70 degrees but, as soon as the seedlings appear, they should be shifted to a much cooler atmosphere, 55 to 60 degrees. Too much warmth in the seedling stage makes for spindly plants rather than short, stocky specimens and retards flowering.

If the seeds can be sown towards the end of February, you can have good strong plants ready for setting out in early May, where they will start blooming almost immediately. Give each plant plenty of elbow room to develop properly and snip off the growing point when the plants are about six inches tall to induce a stout, bushy habit of growth.

Groucho and Me

Wall Street Threw In Towel

'I Would Have Lost More But That Was All I Had'

This is the eighth in a series of twelve articles based on the best-selling book, "Groucho and Me."

Having four sons open on Broadway in a successful show was the climax of my mother's career. Like any other woman, she had ordered a new dress for the occasion. When I say "ordered," I don't mean she went to Bergdorf Goodman's. She sent to Brooklyn for her dressmaker.

While standing on a chair, being fitted for the gown that was soon to dazzle the first nighters, she slipped and broke her leg.

I believe a disaster of this size would have discouraged most women from going to the theatre, but not my mother. If anything, that made the opening night even more exciting.

I doubt if anyone ever entered a theatre more triumphantly than she did. Smiling and waving gaily to the audience, she was carried in on a stretcher and deposited in a front row box seat.

In spite of the old scenery and the shabby production, "I'll Say She Is!" was a tremendous success. Critics swooned with joy. And when they came to, they raved ecstatically.

A number of them wrote, "Where have these boys been hiding all these years?" The fact is, we hadn't been hiding at all. We had been playing around New York in big-time vaudeville for a long time. I guess the critics don't get much news of the outside world.

We played "I'll Say She Is!" for three years. Then in 1926 Sam Harris, a fine producer, put us under contract. He engaged George S. Kaufman and Morris Ryskind, probably the best two satirical writers in the business, to do the book for us.

Among Kaufman's and Ryskind's many other theatrical bull's-eyes was "Of Thee I Sing," the first musical play to win the Pulitzer Prize. To insure the success of our new show, "Cocoanuts," Mr. Harris engaged an unknown composer named Irving Berlin, who up to that time had knocked off only three or four hundred hit songs.

The play was a big hit. Sooner than you can say "show business," it had attracted my attention, and the attention of the country. It was a little thing called the stock market. I first became acquainted with it around 1926.

It was a pleasant surprise to discover that I was a pretty shrewd trader. Or at least so it seemed, for everything I bought went up. I had no financial adviser. Who needed one? You could close your eyes, stick your finger anywhere on the big board and the stock you had just bought would start rising.

My salary in "Cocoanuts" was around $2,000 a week, but this was pin money compared to the dough I was theoretical-ly making in Wall Street. Mind you, I enjoyed doing the show, but I had very little interest in the salary.

One Wednesday afternoon on Broadway, Chico encountered a Wall Street tipster who told him in a whisper, "Chico, I just came from Wall Street and all they're talking about down the street is Anaconda Copper. It's selling at $138 a share and it's rumored that it'll go to $500! Grab it before it's too late! This is right out of the horse's mouth!"

Chico, a well-known horse lover, immediately rushed to the theatre with news of this bonanza. It was a matinee day and we held the curtain for 30 minutes until our broker, finally assured us that we had been lucky enough to get 600 shares.

The broker even congratulated us. He said, "It isn't often that anyone gets in on the ground floor of a company like Anaconda."

Then, one spectacular Tuesday, Wall Street threw in the towel and collapsed.

Some of the people I knew lost millions. I was luckier. All I lost was $240,000 (or 120 weeks of work at $2,000 per.) I would have lost more but that was all the money I had.

Hollywood Today

By Sheilah Graham

Era Ended, Lucy Wept

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—Desi Arnaz kissed Lucille Ball on the cheek, and Lucille hurried to her dressing room and wept. It was the end of an era. The last Desilu Playhouse show, "The Redhead Meets the Mustache."

It all began in 1952. A total of 180 half-hour "I Love Lucy" shows, and 12 hour-long spectaculars. "I'm going to New York to find a house," said Lucille. Without Desi. She will star in a musical on Broadway, for Morton Da Costa. Desi will do some golfing, and take care of the Desilu enterprises.

Princess Grace Kelly and Prince Ranier have been entertaining Sir Winston and Lady Churchill in Monte Carlo. With all this fun why should Grace ever return to making movies in Hollywood? The answer is, she won't.

Jetting in and out of the big city, first, to interview Laurence Harvey at "21" ... At near-by tables were Joan Crawford and former universal-international executive Al Daff. Joan, looking more clean-cut than ever, and prettier, with her new light red hair ... and Daff told me, "the actors should get a share of post-1948 pictures sold to television." ... Also, Douglas Fairbanks was there, lunching with Canadian industrialist Lou Lewchewler, and others. I asked Doug, who had jetted in from London for the day, "are you here on a movie deal?" He replied: "I'm here on dull things like land--land, lovely land."

Broadway producer David Merrick, I learned from Harvey, has bought the American stage rights to the London stage hit, "The Long and the Short and the Tall," which Laurence will make as a movie in Europe when he finishes "Butterfield 8" with Elizabeth Taylor.

Margaret Leighton--in private life Mrs. Laurence Harvey--underwent hypnosis, the day before she opened in her West End play, and reports she felt absolutely relaxed. The play, "The Wrong Side of the Park," received the right side of applause from the first-night audience and the critics.

Gordon and Sheila MacRae, who are making nothing but money on TV and in night clubs, will get away from it all after four weeks at the Desert Inn of Las Vegas, to baby-sit with their four gushing oil wells in the new West Texas field.

David Niven is still waiting for the script of "On My Honor," the story of Lord Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scout movement. This was the story planned by the late Cecil B. De Mille as his "next" picture. His company is carrying on.

Ten years ago, Rod Steiger wrote a screen story about the revival of Nazism in Germany, and tried to sell it. No luck. Now he thinks he has a hot property--if he can find it. Rod and wife Claire Bloom expect their first baby in June.

Dairy Protest Halts 'Gestapo' Tactics

Provincial dairy branch officials have stopped "coercion" of customers of the Milky Way Dairy following a protest by the company last week, a spokesman for the firm said yesterday.

Bridge Offer Now Official

Premier Bennett's offer to make a free gift of the First Narrows Bridge to Vancouver and West Vancouver was made official yesterday by introduction of the First Narrows Bridge Gift Act, 1960.

The offer is contingent upon the two areas constructing and opening a second crossing (bridge or tunnel) of the First Narrows.

Only other proviso is that tolls charged on either of the crossings must not be higher than they are now.

The story broke in the papers, said Henry Robinson, the company's manager.

Mr. Robinson last Thursday charged the dairy branch with using "gestapo" tactics in an attempt to enforce a 1959 order-in-council which makes illegal the sale of milk in 64-ounce cartons.

He said last night that dairy branch officials had only called on about half of the dairy's retail-store customers before abandoning that approach.

He claimed government officials were coercing his customers because they threatened legal action against them if they continued to handle the 64-ounce cartons.

"We only lost one customer and now we have him back," the dairy manager stated.

He said the dairy will continue to market its 64-ounce cartons of milk in defiance of the government order until the order is withdrawn or is tested in the courts.

France to Be Ruled By Decree for Year

PARIS (CP) — The French government decided Monday to ask for broad powers to clean up the aftermath of the Algerian rebellion. Parliament was called into an emergency session today to approve the request.

The call for practically unlimited authority — vested in the cabinet, not in the personal hands of President de Gaulle — came quickly on the heels of the collapse of the revolt. The cabinet moved to take over sweeping decree powers to govern France for one year. One observer said it would be "like a state of siege, without the formal proclamation."

Prodded by de Gaulle, the cabinet also decided to lay charges against the revolt leaders.

SECURITY CHARGE
Revolt leaders Pierre Lagailarde, already under arrest, and Joseph Ortiz, who fled, will be prosecuted. Charge will be an attack on the security of the state.

Premier Debre's office said the assembly would be asked to grant the government power to take certain steps for one year without consulting the legislators.

MORE POWER
Reports said these would cover changes in army personnel plus more power to disband semi-Fascist militia-men — brought into the open by the uprising.

Parliament also may get news of a cabinet shuffle. Some reports said Debre — branded by some as soft on the rebels — might quit.

SABOTAGED?
Some charged that de Gaulle's plans to transfer politically-minded officers out of Algiers had been largely sabotaged over the last few months by rightist officials, including Armed Forces Minister Pierre Guillaumat.

Through the crisis, Guillaumat, Vice-Premier Jacques Soustelle and several other ministers were against imposing the government's will on the rebels.

NO DICTATOR
De Gaulle could have taken the broad powers for himself. This was under consideration last week, but was turned down because the president is sensitive about charges that he would like to be a dictator.

With news of the settlers' surrender, the franc recovered sharply and French stocks jumped.

Officials said there is no change in France's plan for the Sahara test of its first atomic weapons this month.

Meanwhile, a one-hour general strike was observed in France to demonstrate support of de Gaulle's stand-fast Algerian policy.

And Moscow reports say Russia, with an eye to the summit, has given strong indications it is solidly behind de Gaulle in the conflict.

Battle Toll: 20 Dead

ALGERS (AP) — The Algerian corps commander, Gen. Jean Crepin, said Monday the official report of the street battle a week ago Sunday listed 20 dead and about 143 wounded. Unofficial reports listed the dead as high as 27.

Crepin said the firing was started "by a provocateur who was in the middle of the demonstrators." He said the casualty list included 14 gendarmes killed and 123 wounded.

GALVESTON, Tex. — William Badgett, 56, father of the Badgett quads, died Monday — the 21st birthday of his famous children.

British, French Believe Russia Stronger Than U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A news magazine reported Monday that polls taken by U.S. government agencies indicate a majority of British and French people believe Russia leads the U.S. in military strength.

The magazine said eight heretofore confidential polls in 13 non-Communist countries over the past four years also indicated the United States has never regained scientific prestige it lost when Russia launched Sputnik I.

Defence Secretary Thomas S. Gates yesterday disputed the idea Russia has overtaken the United States in military power. He appeared before the Senate defence appropriations sub-committee. (See story below.)

The magazine said the polls formed the basis of a good portion of recent testimony given to the House space committee by George V. Allen, director of the U.S. Information Agency (USIA). Allen testified that American prestige had suffered with the launching of Sputnik I in 1957.

President Eisenhower, at his news conference last week, questioned whether international prestige was involved in the space race.

The report said a summary of the polls taken by the U.S. information service and other agencies indicated the effect of Sputnik I was "to plunge U.S. scientific prestige far below that of the U.S.S.R."

Although U.S. prestige was said to have picked up in the 18 months after the launching of the first Sputnik, the polls showed it never regained any appreciable lead, Newsweek said.

According to the magazine, USIA officials suggested Eisenhower was thinking in terms of the general esteem in which America is held when he spoke last week about "admirable" U.S. space achievements.

Newsweek said the polls

showed the loss of U.S. prestige was particularly acute in India. It said "there 58 per cent believed Russia was ahead in space developments; only 7 per cent thought the U.S. was ahead."

Polls among Turkish students and in Italy indicated the same belief, Newsweek said.

No More on Missiles Defence Chief Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defence Secretary Thomas S. Gates told a sceptical Congress yesterday if he had all the money he wanted, he wouldn't spend any more on missiles "at this time."

Gates made the statement as members of the senate defence appropriations committee questioned him closely on the adequacy of American missile power.

Disarmament

East, West Meet

LONDON (Reuters) — The disarmament policies of East and West will come under close unofficial scrutiny here today at a conference attended by delegates from 19 countries including the United States and Canada.

Organizers of the three-day meeting, described as a "foot-hills conference," have stressed that delegates will attend strictly in a personal capacity.

But the discussions are expected to indicate the flexibility of the East and the West in altering policy to reach agreement on international disarmament.

The Eastern delegates are not expected to depart from basic Communist policies, but the line they take might indicate how conciliatory their governments could become, given a positive response from the West.

Canada will be represented by Milton Gregg, labor minister in the former Liberal government.

One of the East's delegates is Dr. A. Arzumanyan, member of Russia's Parliament and of the central committee of the Communist party. He will speak on the economic consequences of disarmament.

Big Ben Leaning

LONDON (UPI) — London has a leaning tower of its own. It is the 302-foot tower topped by famed Big Ben.

A check disclosed that the tower had a tilt of four inches from the vertical. The check was made after cracks were discovered in the thick masonry where an arcade joins the foot of the tower. Some of the cracks were almost two inches wide.

But a spokesman for the ministry of works said "there is no need for alarm — four inches out of the true is a tower of that height is not serious."

Already Disarmed —That's Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has no choice on the disarmament question because it already is disarmed, Jean T. Richard (L-Ottawa) said in the Commons Monday.

"We have a very well trained group of men and women in our armed forces but they are disarmed," he said. "They have no weapons to wage a modern war or to defend against modern war."

Leader Faces Trial

Revolt Collapses, De Gaulle Triumphs

ALGIERS (AP) — The French insurrection in Algiers ended ingloriously Monday with one of the two leaders in custody and the other in flight. (See also Page 22.)

The last die-hards marched out of the barricades after getting a harsh ultimatum to form a unit with the French Foreign Legion to fight Algeria's Moslem rebels or go home and face possible trial for subversion.

UNBENDING

Moving firmly to end the eight-day uprising, President Charles de Gaulle's government laid down the unbending alternatives. They were relayed to the insurgents by a paratroop colonel at a meeting behind the barricades Sunday night.

A government spokesman said 420 of the insurgents who surrendered with their military leader, Pierre LaGaillarde, agreed to serve with the legion as a special unit. The 29-year-old LaGaillarde, a deputy in the French Parliament, was arrested and flown to Paris where he will face trial. Joseph Ortiz, the saloon keeper who was political boss of the insurrection, fled as his comrades fled out of the barricades to surrender. A warrant was issued for his arrest.

All the men with LaGaillarde were told they could return to their families, but if they did so they faced investigations. These would be made by authorities sent from Paris, not local officials who might be sympathetic. Those insurgents would be tried who were found to have participated in an "attack on the internal security of the state," the spokesman said.

BARRICADES DOWN

Down came the insurgent's barricades of paving stone and rubble — bristling symbols of their defiance of President de Gaulle's policy of self-determination for Algeria's 9,000,000 Moslems.

After de Gaulle's speech Friday commanding the army to restore order, the Algiers generals brought up overwhelming force Sunday. They cordoned off the insurgent camp in the centre of the city from direct support of the civilian population.

SHOWDOWN

When the showdown came, the screaming mobs who had cheered the insurgents with cries of "Algeria is French" were nowhere in sight.

Left in isolation, bombarded with leaflets and loudspeaker broadcasts, the defenders of the barricades gave in.

Cause of Concern

'White Tie' Bar Charged by MP

OTTAWA (UPI) — A Socialist member of Parliament complained yesterday that a "white tie" bar had been placed around Prime Minister John Diefenbaker's scheduled Feb. 17 speech opening the new national gallery.

Trailer Parks Fight for Life

VANCOUVER (CP) — Trailer park operators in British Columbia will ask the provincial government for protection against municipal legislation which threatens to force them out of business.

H. W. Herridge (CCF, Kootenay West) said invitations to the opening specifying white tie were "a cause of considerable discussion and concern" among MPs and others.

"Many persons, including myself, interested in art and culture and in hearing the prime minister speak will be unable to attend because of the lack of the designated accommodation," he told the Commons.

"Why lower a white tie curtain around the prime minister at this time?"

Immigration and Citizenship Minister Fairclough, who reports to Parliament for the gallery, said arrangements for the opening were handled by the board of trustees and were outside her jurisdiction.

Red Rocket

Second Shot Dead On

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Russia announced Monday it test-fired a second powerful new rocket so successfully Sunday that its current series of mid-Pacific tests have been wound up halfway through the scheduled period.

Observers here said it was likely that after the apparently successful test program, a spectacular new Soviet space attempt may be made any day now.

The tests were scheduled to end Feb. 15.

The announcement of the test, unlike that of the first rocket launching Jan. 20, did not mention the rocket's range of accuracy.

The first rocket hit within 14 miles of its target. The latest test was said to have been "in accordance with the plan of perfecting a more powerful ballistic rocket."

Western observers had no doubt that Sunday's test was as accurate as the first.

Russian scientists also have spoken of instrument packages bound for Venus and Mars and the landing of a cosmic station on the moon.

Budget Ready For Legislature

Toronto Rejects Stampede

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian National Exhibition has rejected a proposal to seek the Calgary Stampede for the 1960 show.

General manager Hiram McCallum said Monday the CNE was looking for something different but Toronto audiences would not support rodeos.

"There would also be objections from the Humane Society," he said. "A lot of animals suffer broken legs."

British Columbia's record budget, expected to be as high as $325,000,000, is all ready to be presented to the legislature.

From his hospital bed yesterday, Premier Bennett put the final touches to the budget. He met with deputy finance minister G. S. Bryson in the morning and his economic adviser, J. V. Fisher, in the afternoon.

BUSY WEEKEND

The premier spent all weekend going over the budget. Yesterday the premier was reported to be progressing favorably and he spent considerable time walking carefully around his hospital room. He hopes to be in the House about Feb. 12 to present his budget.

Border Troops Clash

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector (UPI) — Israel and the United Arab Republic Monday exchanged threats of war following the sixth straight day of sporadic troop clashes along the Syrian frontier.

A new incident was reported last night. An Israeli spokesman said Syrian machine guns opened fire for 10 minutes on Israeli positions. He said the Israelis did not return the fire.

STATE OF EMERGENCY

(In Cairo, the government declared a state of emergency, all leaves were cancelled throughout the armed forces and it was reported Egyptian troops already were moving toward the disputed sector.)

In Israel, the situation was equally tense, with Premier David Ben-Gurion threatening a new Israeli military campaign if the United Nations Peace Force failed to prevent what he called further Arab violations in a demilitarized zone along the Syrian-Israel border. Tension heightened when Israeli and Syrian jets joined the battle for the first time.

CLAMP BOTH JAWS

Cairo radio declared last night that the U.A.R. stood "ready to clamp both jaws (Egypt and Syria) and crush Israel between them."

"We are ready to hit, hit, hit, if necessary as far as Tel Aviv," the broadcast said. Both here and in Damascus, top government and military officials met hurriedly to consider the latest and most serious clash in the six days of border tension. Syrian and Israeli forces battled in the zone early yesterday at Tawfik on the Syrian side. There also were conflicting reports from both sides of an air battle over the zone.

Arms Budget Up in U.K.

LONDON (AP) — Britain's defence budget for the coming year will go up by £120,000,000 or £150,000,000 to its highest peacetime level, government informants report.

Fewer Politicians Needed Macmillan Tells Basutos

MASERU, Basutoland (UPI) — With more sportsmen and fewer politicians the world would be a better place, British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan said during discussions here yesterday.

Thousands of gaily dressed Basutos gave Macmillan a friendly welcome when he landed in the blazing sun.

Many of the crowd wore typical Basuto conical straw hats. Commenting on the recent Basutoland elections, Macmillan said he was happy to see modern democratic methods soundly based on traditions of the past. "Let the old traditional methods and the new elected democracy work as partners, not as rivals," he added.

Macmillan and his wife were presented with colored shawls and conical straw hats.

CAPETOWN (UPI) — Prime Minister Macmillan flew here yesterday to the warmest welcome of his South African tour and an assurance South Africa had no ulterior motive in inviting him to visit the Union.

Aftermath of Rains

160 Loads Fill Used to Mend Wrecked Roads

DUNCAN—More than 650 yards of fill—about 160 truck loads—were dumped into rips and tears in roads in the Cowichan district during mopping-up work after the torrential rains caused flooding last week.

All but one road had been fixed yesterday. Department of highways crews will start work on Tzouhalem Road today.

North Cowichan crews put about 160 yards of fill in a 70-foot-long washout on Richards Trail yesterday.

All are open to traffic. Most damage was done to Richards Trail, Tzouhalem, Doupe, and the Cowichan Bay and Cowichan Lake Roads.

A B.C. Telephone spokesman said 36 poles were knocked down and 1,300 subscribers' lines broken; there were 16 trees blown over lines between Shawngnan Lake and Port Renfrew. The last broken lines were fixed yesterday.

Crews cleared more than 100 trees off roads.

Ted Marsh, highways foreman, said Clem-Clem-Alutz bridge on the Cowichan Indian reserve will definitely be replaced, but he could give no date when work will start on it. It is still closed to vehicle and pedestrian traffic.

Court Denies Plea

DUNCAN—A 22-year-old truck driver was refused a partial suspension of his driver's licence yesterday by Magistrate A. C. Sutton.

Amarjat Singh's licence was suspended for 30 days and he was fined $150 when he pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving near Chemainus on Sunday.

Mr. Singh had asked that he be allowed to drive during an eight-hour work day.

The magistrate said George Lindsay, superintendent of the motor vehicle branch, had recently criticized magistrates for doing it.

"If it is going to endanger your living, you should take care," said Magistrate Sutton.

Legislature Visited By Students

Twenty students from Campbell River High School took in proceedings at the legislature yesterday as guests of Elk Falls division of Crown Zellerbach and the Campbell River school board.

They were the vanguard of what will be almost daily educational visits by students.

Education and democracy groups of 34 students, sponsored by the B.C. Electric, will visit the legislature every Thursday and Friday, starting this week.

Other groups already booked include Qualicum High School, Feb. 8; Ladysmith High School, Feb. 16 and 17; Chemainus High School, Feb. 23; UBC foreign students, Feb. 26; Alberni District High School, March 1; Courtenay High School, March 7; and Ladysmith High School, March 8.

2,000 Due For Shots

DUNCAN—More than 2,000 persons are due for their third and last anti-polio shots here next Monday.

They will be given at the Central Vancouver Island Health Unit on Canada Ave. Hours are from 1:30 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. A second clinic will be held two days later, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Liquor Store Open Later In Nanaimo

NANAIMO—Liquor store hours here have been extended on Wednesday and Friday.

From February 15, Wednesday hours will be from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. instead of closing at noon, and on Friday the store will be open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Closing time will be at 6 p.m. on the remainder of the days.

Nanaimo Trio Badly Burned

NANAIMO—Three Nanaimo men were badly burned yesterday when a gas pipe beside which they were working exploded.

The men, Len Swanson, A. Guelette and Thomas Allan, were all detained in Nanaimo General Hospital with severe burns to their heads, arms and legs.

They were working on sewer pipe excavation between Nicol and Halliburton Streets when a ditch-digging machine split the domestic gas pipe.

Shortly afterwards, a dropped cigaret is believed to have caused the explosion, which shattered windows of nearby homes.

The men scrambled from the excavation by means of a ladder which was lowered to them. The gas continued to burn for some time until gas company officials turned it off at the mains.

Home Completely Destroyed

Bark, Debris Clog Hose In Fire at Oyster Bay

CAMPBELL RIVER—The house of an Oyster Bay man was completely destroyed during the weekend while firemen struggled to free hose nozzles clogged by bark and debris in the water supply.

Con York, a mill worker at Elk Falls, was alone in the house at the time of the fire. His wife and two children were visiting relatives at Wil- low Point.

Mr. York was awakened by smoke in the bedroom, and then noticed flames in the furnace register. He found his telephone out of order, and had to try four other houses in the district before he was able to call the fire department in Campbell River.

The five-room frame structure was completely engulfed in flame when the firemen arrived. They were handicapped in fighting the blaze by debris in the water drawn from nearby Willow Creek.

All personal belongings were destroyed. The Red Cross is sending money and bedding to the burned-out family. The house was only partially insured.

Nanaimo Building 'Ominously Low'

NANAIMO—Building figures for January were ominously low in both the city and Greater Nanaimo area. Permits for two homes worth $30,000 were taken out of city hall, that was the total building for the whole month within city boundaries. Last year, it totalled $180,000 for the month.

In the Greater Nanaimo area, permits valued at $58,400 were issued, against $154,000 in January, 1959.

Confidential Polls Cause Debate

British, French Believe Russia Strongest

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A news magazine reported Monday that polls taken by U.S. government agencies indicate a majority of British and French people believe Russia leads the U.S. in military strength.

The magazine said eight

heretofore confidential polls in 13 non-Communist countries over the past four years also indicated the United States has never regained scientific prestige it lost when Russia launched Sputnik I.

Defence Secretary Thomas S. Gates yesterday disputed the idea Russia has overtaken the United States in military power. He appeared before the Senate defence appropriations sub-committee.

The magazine said the polls formed the basis of a good portion of recent testimony given to the House space committee by George V. Allen, director of the U.S. Information Agency (USIA). Allen testified that American prestige had suffered with the launching of Sputnik I in 1957.

President Eisenhower, at his news conference last week, questioned whether international prestige was involved in the space race.

The report said a summary of the polls taken by the U.S. information service and other agencies indicated the effect of Sputnik I was "to plunge U.S. scientific prestige far below that of the U.S.S.R."

Although U.S. prestige was said to have picked up in the 18 months after the launching of the first Sputnik, the polls showed it never regained any appreciable lead, the magazine said.

According to the magazine, USIA officials suggested Eisenhower was thinking in terms of the general esteem in which America is held when he spoke last week about "admirable" U.S. space achievements.

The magazine said the polls

showed the loss of U.S. prestige was particularly acute in India. It said "there 58 per cent believed Russia was ahead in space developments; only 7 per cent thought the U.S. was ahead."

Polls among Turkish students and in Italy indicated the same belief, the magazine said.

Disarmament

East, West Meet

LONDON (Reuters) — The disarmament policies of East and West will come under close unofficial scrutiny here today at a conference attended by delegates from 19 countries including the United States and Canada.

Organizers of the three-day meeting, described as a "foot-hills conference," have stressed that delegates will attend strictly in a personal capacity.

But the discussions are expected to indicate the flexibility of the East and the West in altering policy to reach agreement on international disarmament.

The Eastern delegates are not expected to depart from basic Communist policies, but the line they take might indicate how conciliatory their governments could become, given a positive response from the West.

Canada will be represented by Milton Gregg, labor minister in the former Liberal government.

One of the East's delegates is Dr. A. Arzumani, member of Russia's Parliament and of the central committee of the Communist party. He will speak on the economic consequences of disarmament.

Big Ben Leaning

LONDON (UPI)—London has a leaning tower of its own. It is the 362-foot tower topped by famed Big Ben.

A check disclosed that the tower had a tilt of four inches from the vertical. The check was made after cracks were discovered in the thick masonry where an arcade joins the foot of the tower. Some of the cracks were almost two inches wide.

But a spokesman for the ministry of works said "there is no need for alarm—four inches out of the true in a tower of that height is not serious."

Already Disarmed —That's Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has no choice on the disarmament question because it already is disarmed, Jean T. Richard (L. Ottawa) said in the Commons Monday.

"We have a very well-trained group of men and women in our armed forces but they are disarmed," he said. "They have no weapons to wage a modern war or to defend against modern war."

Leader Faces Trial

Revolt Collapses, De Gaulle Triumphs

ALGIERS (AP) — The French insurrection in Algiers ended ingloriously Monday with one of the two leaders in custody and the other in flight. (See also Page 22.)

The last die-hards marched out of the barricades after getting a harsh army dictate to form a unit with the French Foreign Legion to fight Algeria's Moslem rebels or go home and face possible trial for subversion.

UNBENDING

Moving firmly to end the eight-day uprising, President Charles de Gaulle's government laid down the unbending alternatives. They were relayed to the insurgents by a paratrooper colonel at a meeting behind the barricades Sunday night.

A government spokesman said 420 of the insurgents who surrendered with their military leader, Pierre LaGaillarde, agreed to serve with the legion as a special unit.

The 29-year-old LaGaillarde, a deputy in the French Parliament, was arrested and flown

to Paris where he will face trial.

Joseph Ortiz, the saloon keeper who was political boss of the insurrection, fled as his comrades filed out of the barricades to surrender. A warrant was issued for his arrest.

All the men with LaGaillarde were told they could return to their families, but if they did so they faced investigations. These would be made by authorities sent from Paris, not local officials who might be sympathetic. Those insurgents would be tried who were found to have participated in an "attack on the internal security of the state," the spokesman said.

The insurgents were loaded into army trucks and taken to a camp near Algiers.

BARRICADES DOWN

Down came the insurgents' barricades of paving stone and rubble—bristling symbols of their defiance of President de Gaulle's policy of self-determination for Algeria's 9,000,000 Moslems.

After de Gaulle's speech Friday commanding the army to restore order, the Algiers generals brought up overwhelming force Sunday. They cordoned off the insurgent camp in the centre of the city from direct support of the civilian population.

SHOWDOWN

When the showdown came, the screaming mobs who had cheered the insurgents with cries of "Algeria is French" were nowhere in sight. Left in isolation, bombarded with leaflets and loudspeaker broadcasts, the defenders of the barricades gave in.

Millions For Towns

EDMONTON (CP) — The province of Alberta will give about $9,600,000 to towns and villages this year as the second phase of Premier Manning's five-year development plan. Money will go for recreation facilities, street and sidewalk pavement and construction.

Red Rocket

Second Shot Dead On

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Russia announced Monday it test-fired a second powerful new rocket so successfully Sunday that its current series of mid-Pacific tests have been wound up halfway through the scheduled period.

Observers here said it was likely that after the apparently successful test program, a spectacular new Soviet space attempt may be made any day now.

The tests were scheduled to end Feb. 15.

The announcement of the test, unlike that of the first rocket launching Jan. 20, did not mention the rocket's range or accuracy.

The first rocket hit within 1 1/2 miles of its target.

The latest test was said to have been "in accordance with the plan of perfecting a more powerful ballistic rocket."

Western observers had no doubt that Sunday's test was as accurate as the first.

Russian scientists also have spoken of instrument packages bound for Venus and Mars and the landing of a cosmic station on the moon.

Buried Alive

Glad to be alive after being buried 25 hours in snow-slide at Invermere in south-eastern B.C. is 60-year-old highway worker Jim Duke. He suffered extreme exhaustion and minor cuts but no broken bones. He had been given up for dead. (See story, Page 5.)

Alert Meets Heavy Seas

COOS BAY, Ore. (AP) — The old 100-foot ship Alert, based for the Galapagos Islands with 20 would-be colonists aboard, was reported taking water Monday night in heavy seas 12 miles out in the Pacific.

Budget Ready For Legislature

Toronto Rejects Stampede

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian National Exhibition has rejected a proposal to seek the Calgary Stampede for the 1960 show.

General manager Hiram McCallum said Monday the CNE was looking for something different but Toronto audiences would not support rodeos.

"There would also be objections from the Humane Society," he said. "A lot of animals suffer broken legs."

British Columbia's record budget, expected to be as high as $325,000,000, is all ready to be presented to the legislature.

From his hospital bed yesterday, Premier Bennett put the final touches to the budget. He met with deputy finance minister G. S. Bryson in the morning and his economic adviser, J. V. Fisher, in the afternoon.

BUSY WEEKEND

The premier spent all weekend going over the budget. Yesterday the premier was reported to be progressing favorably and he spent considerable time walking carefully around his hospital room.

He hopes to be in the House about Feb. 12 to present his budget.
